Transcript of welcome video by Brian Webster-Henderson, Department of Learning and Teaching Enhancement

November 2017

Welcome to the Department of Learning and Teaching Enhancement. My name is Brian Webster-Henderson and I am Dean of Learning and Teaching for the university and Professor of Nursing by background. Within the department pages you'll find information around all our staff, the activities that they are focused on and lots of other additional information that would be really beneficial to you, particularly to the academic community.

As a department, we really are focused on supporting our colleagues in the Schools, enhance their learning and teaching approaches and pedagogical skills and knowledge. Our vision as a department is to really become a centre for excellence for pedagogic knowledge and research – and that's a growing agenda within the department and across the university.

If you look at our intranet pages – I'd really encourage you to look at the section on Enhance. There you will find information around the new quick guides that we've been developing, the new staff development opportunities that we are offering as a department including face-to-face seminars and tweet chats. There's something there for everyone and we recognise that as an academic community people are busy and have full working lives, and so we're trying to tailor the needs of our department and the needs of the university and help support staff in a range of different ways.

If you would like to know more about the work of the department please don't hesitate to contact any of the team or to contact me directly. And, if we can provide something for you that you don't think we're offering currently, we'd like to hear about that too.

Thank you very much.
