

Introduction to Learning and Teaching in Higher Education (International)

Fully online, certificate of credit from Edinburgh Napier University

The opportunity to deepen your understanding and develop your teaching practice

This course is for anyone working with students in a higher education setting and looking to enhance their academic practice

MODULE INCLUDES

- Introduction to educational theory
- Student-centred active learning
- Developing strategies for student engagement
- Practicalities of session planning
- Reflective practice

BENEFITS

- Deeper understanding of student-centred active learning approaches and how they can be applied to practice in a range of contexts
- Increased confidence in developing academic practice in changing contexts
- Active and engaged students

In this fully online elongated (October-June) 20-credit MSc-level module we will support you to build a community of inquiry and engage in peer support; analyse, reflect on, and enhance your practice; and develop more engaging and effective teaching approaches.

Supported by regular webinars, you will work through interactive content provided via our Virtual Learning Environment which will give you the opportunity to reflect on your learning with fellow participants. Homework assignments will support your preparation of two formative assignments with feedback designed to support your final submission.

“I found that students’ learning initiative, enthusiasm and interest were greatly improved, and their test scores became considerable”
