BrowZine is great for helping you keep up to date with current research in your discipline. It enables you to:

- Create a personal library of favourite journals.
- Discover library journal subscriptions you weren’t aware of.
- Save articles on your mobile device to read later – even when you’re offline.

Below are instructions on using the web version. (It’s also available as an app for Apple, Android and Amazon devices.)

Please note that BrowZine does not give access to all of Edinburgh Napier University Library’s journals.

- Not all publishers are supported – for a list, see http://support.thirdiron.com/knowledgebase/articles/132654-what-publishers-do-you-support
  - If an unsupported title is returned by a BrowZine search, a link to LibrarySearch is provided.
- Pre-2005 volumes are not included.
- Neither are magazine-type journals and newspapers.

Getting started with BrowZine

1. Use the BrowZine link in LibrarySearch

https://my.napier.ac.uk/Library
https://staff.napier.ac.uk/Services/Library
2. This link (https://browzine.com/libraries/1251) gives direct access to Edinburgh Napier’s holdings on or off campus.

3. If you google BrowZine, you will be asked to choose your library. If you choose another university library, you will be able to set up an account, but will be blocked when you try to access an article.

4. Search for a journal by title, subject or ISSN, or browse by subject area.
5. Select a journal

6. Add to My bookshelf.

7. At this point you will be prompted to set up an account unless you already have one.

https://my.napier.ac.uk/Library  https://staff.napier.ac.uk/Services/Library
8. Once you have validated your account by clicking the email sent to you, the journal you selected will be added to the first available space on your bookshelf.

9. To move journals to other shelves or bookcases, click on the top right of the journal cover.

10. To move the selected journal to a space in the same bookcase, click the grey bar (containing the arrow) in your preferred location.
b. The journal will now be in your preferred location.

11. To move the journal to a different bookcase, repeat step 10 a) above. Then click on your preferred bookcase title, e.g. Sciences. Repeat step 10 a) above again.
12. To rename a bookcase or shelf,
   a. Click the pencil icon

   b. Make the change and click the tick to save.

13. The red bubbles (see 12 above) on the left of journal covers help you keep track of the number of unread (since you added the journal) articles within a journal.

14. Within a journal issue, unread articles are identified by blue bubbles.

Adding Articles to My Articles

1. Expand the article brief record to see more options.
2. Add the article to your general collection or create a new collection.

3. When you access the first article in a session, you’ll see the university login page, unless you are on campus.

4. The articles you have saved can be accessed from the My Articles link.

https://my.napier.ac.uk/Library
https://staff.napier.ac.uk/Services/Library
5. To Export article records, click Expand > Export Citation

6. Or to Share articles (you will need an existing account (or to create one) for the bibliographic/reference management software/social media platform you choose).
